Nature-based Economy Pavilion

Bangkok Climate Action Week

Forging New Destinies as Climate Action

Under the theme of Rao Likit (tr. We Destine), BKKCAW raises an urgent call to build new systems to ensure survival amidst the worsening effects of climate change. The invitation for change begins from interrogating the systems we live in everyday: our economies, and innovating towards new ways of work that responds to nature – rather than extract from it.

We are here because we would like to spotlight the efforts that Indonesia has done to lead a systemic transformation that fulfill the prosperities of economics and ecologies.

Why This Matters:

Challenging conventional assumptions about economic growth and showcasing the emerging opportunities within nature-based economies.

Always-On: Activation Across the Pavilion

Besides the “core agenda” of sessions and talks, we intend to provide space for always-on activations that initiate individual reflection and learning.

Orientation Wall

A simple visual explaining the pavilion’s core idea of responsible value creation that connects communities, enterprises, markets, finance, policy, and ecosystems.

Product & Story Corners

Rotating displays of products, short films, photo stories, enterprise profiles, and community-linked value chains.

Commitment Board

A visible board where participants can record what they are looking for, offering, or willing to explore after the event.

Case Map

A visual map showing real examples from Indonesia and other Global South contexts, including commodities, locations, enterprises, community actors, buyers, financiers, & enabling policies.

Daily Recap Moment

A short end-of-day session that summarizes key insights, emerging opportunities, and next-day highlights. This helps both full-day and drop-in participants stay connected to the wider flow.
